Q: Get sections of text from website into pandas DataFrame Currently I have the following task a) Read all the stock, commodity and currency data from a website from specific years (eg. 2017, 2016, etc.) b) Create a master data frame with (id, year, section) columns that holds the data for each section (from a - stock, commodity, currency) c) The master data frame must be structured in the form of a dataframe where each section/row is a separate row The code snippet I have to create the master data frame is:

from pprint import pprint
import requests
import pandas as pd
from pprint import pprint
import requests
from lxml import html
import pandas as pd
import csv
from selenium import webdriver

create webdriver
driver = webdriver.Chrome()

initial input URL
base_url = ""

specify the data (example date ranges)
years = ['2017', '2016']

loop over the data and get the sub pages of website for year in years:
for year in years:
    for page in range(1,3):
        page_url = base_url + str(year) + '-' + str(page) + '.html'

        # make the call
        get_data = driver.get(page_url)

        # data = get_data.page_source
        # extract data
        tree = html.fromstring(get_data.page_source) root = tree.getroot()

        currency_tree = root.find('table', {'class': 'sportified_currencytable'})
        currency_table = currency_tree.find(id='mktdata-currencyTable')
